At their last meeting the mayors decided to continue to focus on building trusted relationships by fostering conversation and collaboration across Minnesota. Topics of discussion have been daycare, workforce housing, long commutes and building a strong 5-year economic development plan.

Board members were pleased with the list and thanked IGR for their work.

Wiersum commented that giving out these awards is good business on our part, and we benefit from these good relationships.
McComber made a motion to approve the list of legislators for recognition as LMC Legislators of Distinction as submitted, seconded by Omerza. Motion carried.

6. Discussion Items
   6.1 LMCIT Update – Included in BRAC update above
   6.2 Legal Update – The Minnesota Supreme Court granted accelerated review of St. Paul’s organized collection appeal. There are two issues on appeal: (1) whether the Minnesota Waste Management Act preempts the referendum petition under a conflict-preemption analysis, and (2) whether the referendum, if successful, would result in an unconstitutional impairment of the organized-collection contract between the City and a group of waste haulers.

On June 12, the Minnesota Supreme Court heard oral argument in Bloomington’s organized collection case. The Supreme Court will decide whether the city properly rejected a petition for a proposed charter amendment, seeking to “supersede” the City’s organized-collection ordinance, because: (1) the charter amendment is an improper use of referendum power that violates the City Charter’s 15-day limitation on filing a referendum petition, or (2) the charter amendment will result in an unconstitutional impairment of the existing organized-collection contract.

The final matter reported on by Beety was the Minnesota Supreme Court’s decision to review both the Minneapolis Safe and Sick Time and Minimum Wage cases.

   c. Metro Cities
      McNeill stated that Gene Ranieri from the city of Minneapolis will be presenting at their August Board meeting. Their policy adoption committees have met once so far this summer.
